Ishi's Introduction to Aviation

By

Richard Burrill

Saturday Sept. 9 10:30am

“Ishi” was the last known free Indian in North America, and that he lived the last of his days during the twentieth century in San Francisco. On Sept. 11, 1911 Ishi watched aviator Robert “Bob” Fowler ascend into the air from Golden Gate Park to set a one day endurance flight of 128 miles. Burrill will bring the interesting lives of these two historic people together for an inspiring lecture you will not want to miss.
